

Talk to your teen

...catch them doing something good and praise them...

*communicate...
communicate...
communicate...*

Some tips for parents...

- teens deserve respect
- adults should respect their teens and expect it in return
- adults should show respect for their teenager's friends
- never berate or belittle a teen in front of his/her peers
- think about how often you ask teens questions and seek their opinions

One of the biggest problems during adolescence is the power struggle that develops between teens and adults.

Recognize the power struggle for what it is...the result of teens wanting to feel powerful in an adult world...find ways of working through it together.

Conversations with teens can be refreshing and insightful...they should be a part of each day.

Most conversations take place in the presence of other people...so find occasions to talk with your teen alone, away from brother, sister and anyone else.

Make sure you listen to what is being said, but also make sure you listen to what is not being said.

Effective communications is the key to healthy relationships.

...teens are apprentice adults, and they need time to breath and learn...

...it is up to the adult to balance freedom and independence with good judgement about when to step in...

Revised 05/2006

Children's Aid Society
LONDON & MIDDLESEX
La Société d'aide à l'enfance